No. 796.

To the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR,

UPON taking up last Saturday's Craftsman, I was agreeably surpriz'd to find, as I thought, a new Turn given to that Paper, the random Guesses at what some body is doing in a Closet dismiss'd, the tiresome delusive Visions of Upholsterer's Politicks closed, and a new Order of Things beginning, a weekly Display of the beauteous Passages in the Antients, and Light thrown upon their obscure Ones; by which the Paper might for the future be as entertaining to the Learned, as it has hitherto been to the Ignorant. I knew the Club had Wit, and I hop'd Grace was a coming: But in the Sequel, I was griev'd to see its Advances were like to be but slow, for, Alas! the same Spirit of Fiction, of false Representations, and of fallacious Inferences, which has sunk their Paper so low, as to encourage another Author to build upon its Ruins, holds on the same footing in their classical Criticisms which it had in their political, and will keep their Learning and their Patriotism upon the same melancholick Level. I insist not upon Doctor A. B's making Virgil guilty of a Solœcism, by reading Diis aliter visum, for Diis aliter visus, which the Syntax requir'd, if the Poet had meant (as the Doctor would have him) "that the "Gods behold Ripheus in a different Light from what "Men did." Such Slips are frequently incident to true Criticks. I forgive it, and claim the like Indulgence to myself upon Occasion. But I hold for absolutely unpardonable, the Usage he has given to the great Belchandwhrezius, by grossly misrepresenting his Edition, and his Scholia. A Great Grandson of that true faithful Editor was some Years ago in England, and honour'd me with a Share in his Friendship. We at that Time drank many a Sixpence together, to the Prosperity of the HANOVER FAMILY, at the Mug House by Salisbury Court, till it was pull'd down by some of the Craftsman's Admirers (who were afterwards hang'd for it; which disgusted Mr. D'Avers, and gave Rise to several curious Papers against the Riot Act.) This ingenious Foreigner made me a Present of the Edition of Virgil, set forth by his honour'd Progenitor, in which the Passage in Question, as taken from a most antient Manuscript in the publick Library at Worms, lies fairly thus,

Cadit & Ripheus, justissimus unus
Qui fuit in Teucris et servantissimus æqui;
Artifici invisus.

Which, if Mr. Trap had had the good Fortune to have seen, his Translation had been, without any Flatness or Ambiguity, unquestionably this,

—— next Ripheus falls, than whom
No Trojan was more just; the Craftsman's Hatred.

The Text being thus, it shews the Impossibility of that Comment's being rais'd upon it which Doctor A. B. with such Confidence would give us for the Editor's; who, in Truth, only observes here that Virgil, more than once, describes this Craftsman by his Attribute, as we find it in this second Book of the Æneis, Artificis Scelus and again in the eleventh Artificis Scelus.

FOR the rest, I deny not that Diftys Cretensis, says Ripheus, was Chancellor of the Exchequer; but then, in the same Page, he writes, that Mr. Chancellor maintain'd a long and obstinate Fight, in Defence of his Country, against its Enemies, aptly stiled by the Doctor treacherous Greeks, who could not prevail against him till they had set the whole Town in a Flame. Dares Phrygius, who gives us the Pictures of his Heroes, says that his Honour was Pectorosus, Vultu hilari subfusco, Nasutus, Facundus, Prudens, Fortis, Dapsilis. These are Disquisitions in Learning, Researches into Antiquity well worthy of Agitation amongst Scholars; and therefore it is great Pity that the Club could not let one Work of Erudition go out of their Hands without dropping again into low modern Topicks, and trite Upholsterisms; fondly anticipating in strong Conceit, the Fall of another RIPHEUS, which Experience should have taught them no longer to expect, since his superior Destiny has so many Years baffled all the various Schemes of Fas & Nefas which they have so plentifully chalk'd out to destroy him.

Diis aliter visum.
quod & hunc in Annum
Vivat & plures.

I am, SIR,
Your humble Servant,

Jan. 9, 1737-8. Philelutherus Knightsbridgensis.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland.

LETTERS of the 17th ult. O. S. from Warsaw, confirm the Alarm they are under in Podolia, and the Frontier Provinces of Poland, for fear their Country should become the Seat of War, upon the Report that a Body of Russians is to march that Way next Spring to the Assistance of the Emperor, and that in this Case the Porte will send an Army of Turks and Tartars thither to oppose their Passage. Mean time they write from Caminiec, that a Russian Captain, accompany'd by 40 Cossacks of the Don, is gone thro' that Place with a private Commission from the Czarina to the Grand Vizier, and that when he arrived at Choczim, the Bashaw of the Town gave him a Convoy of 50 Men to conduct him safely to Cartala in Sibistria, where the Grand Vizier resides.

Those of the 24th ditto, from Vienna say, that Count Seckendorff's Affair continues to turn out in his Favour; that there has not been any personal Examination taken as yet, and that the Colonel and a Captain of his Regiment have Leave to dine with him every Day. They add, that the Marriage of the Princess of Saxony was to be declared the next Day at the Imperial Court: That the Count Oliver de Wallis, who was General of the Ordnance, is made a Velt Marshal; and that the Contagious Distemper in Transilvania rages in spite of the Frost.

From Paris they write, that scarce a Family in that City is free from Colds, attended with a slight Fever; but they are not Morta'. The News of the Death of the Lieutenant General the Marquis de Cille, is contradicted.

A Letter of November the 16th, O. S. from Constantinople, mentions the Apology which the Bashaw of Bender has sent to the Ottoman Court to excuse his Miscarriage at Oczakow. He says, 'that every 'thing was done that could be done to perform the 'Grand Seignior's Orders; That in every Action 'before the general Storm, the Troops did every 'thing in their Power to succeed, but that their 'Vigour flagg'd in the last Attack; That however 'they would have renew'd it next Day, if they had 'not been inform'd by good Hands, that a great 'Body of Russians was advancing to relieve Oc 'zakow; That being uncertain what Number those 'Troops might consist of, and finding his Army 'very much weaken'd by the Loss it had sustain'd 'since the Beginning of the Siege, he thought 'it pudent to retire in order to save the rest of his 'Troops. The Bashaw concluded his Letter by saying, 'He knew very well that his Head must pay for 'his ill Success, and that he expects nothing less 'than his Highness's Orders to take it off.'

Our Letter adds, That the Ministers at the Porte would fain have conceal'd the fatal News of the raising of the Siege from the Populace, but 'twas impossible; for they saw such a Consternation and Gloom in the Countenances at the Seraglio, as made them jealous there was bad News come to Town; and they were quickly inform'd what it was. As the Seraskier of Bender, Gentzi Ali Pasha, is the same that lost one of the Battles which Kouli Kan gain'd over the Turks in Persia, the People murmur sadly that he was intrusted with the Direction of the Siege of Oczakow, rather than the Count de Bonneval, who was first nominated for that Undertaking.

We are assured from Milan, that the King of Sardinia has purchased the Vigevanese in that Dutchy of the Emperor, in order to join it to the Novarese and the Tortonese.

'Tis said that the Match between Don Carlos, King of Naples, and the Princess Royal of Poland, is chiefly owing to the Princess Dowager Amelia; and that the first Overture of it was made at the Interview which she had last Year at Toplitz in Bohemia, with the King and Queen of Poland. This Marriage having been notify'd in Form to the States General by the Saxon Minister, their High Mightinesses are preparing to send a Letter of Congratulation upon it to the King of Poland.

Mr. George Jockson the English Merchant, is set out from Leghorn for Genoa, to reside there as the British Consul, in the room of the late Mr. Bagshaw.

Baron de Stein, a Lieutenant General of Foot, 55.

The Abbe de la Croix, Doctor of the Sorbonne, Great Archdeacon of Paris, and Uncle to M. de la Croix, Steward of the Houshold to the Queen of France, Aged 72.

His Lordship was one of the Sixteen Peers for this Kingdom, Lord Vice Admiral of Scotland, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Orkney and Zetland, &c. This noble Lord eminently possessed the many Virtues and Qualifications which have for many Ages conspicuously distinguished his illustrious Family, particularly an extensive Charity to all in Distress, with an unlimited Benevolence and Love to Mankind: These and many other his uncommon Virtues, rendered him universally respected and beloved, as must his Death be no less regretted. He has left Issue James Lord Aberdour, (who inherits his Virtues no less than his Honours and Estate) and Captain Robert, Representative for the County of Orkney and Zetland.

A Petition was presented to the Town Council by several eminent Heritors of this City, craving, That for the Ornament of the High Street, the great Conveniency of the Inhabitants, &c. the City Guard House may be demolished, and the Guard kept in the Apartments under the City Prison, as the most centrical Place, more contiguous to the Town-House and Courts of Justice, whereby also the Prison and its Contents, will for the future be effectually secured, &c.

Friday last the —— of Leith, William Hunter Master, from Gottenburg, laden with Plank &c. was cast away on the Rocks near Peterhead; but all the Lives are ſaved, as 'tis hop'd will moſt of her Cargo, being the Property of Mr. Robert Bull, Merchant of this City, and inſured.

The Right Hon. the Earl of Stair is now in perfect Health at his Seat of Newlifton near this City, notwithſtanding the Reports in the London News Papers of that noble Lord's Death.

Reading, Jan. 9. We have lately been greatly alarmed by the Accidental breaking out of Fires, which by the good Providence of God, have been happily extinguiſhed without any great Damage.

Yeſterday about 1 o'Clock, a Fire broke out at a Flaxen Warehouſe belonging to the Executors of the late Captain Peacock, in Mill-lane, Reading, which entirely conſumed the ſame, and put the Neighbours in the utmoſt Conſternation; for tho' the Warehouſe was at ſome Diſtance from the Dwelling houſe, yet by the Violence of the Wind, and the Lightneſs of the Flax, the Flames were carried to Mr. Everet's Mill, and the Buck-houſe which ſtood near the Warehouſe actually took Fire, and was with great Difficulty extinguiſhed.
